'What a great gift we've lost'

Corazon C. Aquino, 1933-2009

WORKER OF THE YEAR Acknowledging her pivotal role in the fall of Marcos, Time Magazine picks Cory as Woman of the Year for 1986, the title women to emulate in his years after Queen Elizabeth II and Walter Simpson, for whom English king Edward VIII gave up his throne. She is the only Filipino on the list.

COREY MAGIC Delivering messages like 'Newsworld', something at the Cory magic that inspired the People's Power revolt, paid tribute to her in March 1986 cover. She was also the female donor of the year of media organizations in France, Spain, Australia, South Africa, Japan and Israel.

ONE MORE TIME On the 50th anniversary of Time's Asian edition in 2005, the magazine again chooses Cory as 'Asian girl' looking for in the list of heroes in the region with other Filipinos like Benigno Aquino Jr. and Imelda Marcos.

Grateful nation in mourning for Woman in Yellow

By the Inquirer Editors

A GRATEFUL NATION IS IN mourning for the Woman in Yellow—the graceful widow whose religious awe on the political stage transformed her into a symbol of a world torn by people power and the constant voice in the Philippines' continuing struggle against corrupt, abusive rule.

Corazon "Cory" Aquino's 16-month battle against cancer seemed overflown with prayers told to yellow ribbons. Yet even from her bedridden, her voice remained the voice of democracy.

The nation's predictions, made in family and friends of the cancer-stricken Corazon Aquino, were proved correct. A longtime Marian devotee, the former President passed on in the early hours yesterday, the first Saturday of the month.

Aquino, 76, died "peacefully" at 3:18 a.m. at the Miguel Medical Center, according to her son, Sen Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino II, who made the announcement at 3 a.m.

"We would have wanted to thank each and every one of you for all the prayers and your continued love and support. It was her wish for one another and for our country," the senator told reporters.

The body now lies in state at the La Salle Green Hills gymnasium on Ortigas Avenue in Mandaluyong City, where it will remain for public viewing until Monday morning.

A private funeral is scheduled on Aug. 8, the senator said. He said his mother would be laid to rest next to his father, Senigno "Ninoy" Aquino Jr.

WHAT A GREAT GIFT! BY

Our eternal flame, our Cory

WHEN THE LIGHT OF COREY AQUINO'S LIFE, flickering as it had been, in the final, painful, month of her hospitalization, was finally extinguished, the country had been, in a sense, expecting it. Yet the news was still received with shock and grief has settled over the nation, uniting rich and poor, old and young, the pious and the apathetic, men and women, soldiers and civilians.

Unity is a rare thing in our country; we have it now; and adding to the feelings of grief is the painful realization that it took the passing of Cory to reunite a divided nation.

In 1940, with moribund voice, Jawaharlal Nehru informed his people of the passing of Mahatma Gandhi with these immortal words: "The light has gone out of our lives and there is darkness everywhere." There was no single great rational figure to take the country of Cory's passing; instead, a quiet announcement came from her grief-stricken son, and there began the passing on of the news, and the sharing of fond memories.

Grateful nation in mourning for Woman in Yellow

By Jose A. Dela Cruz

In June, in a statement read by a spokesman, Cory denounced as a "shameless abuse of power" President Macapagal-Arroyo's congressional efforts to amend the 1987 Constitution. Three efforts, critics say, are part of a scheme to prolong Mr. Arroyo's grip on power beyond her expiring term in 2010.

It was as though Cory was back in the hall of mirrors—before the high ground on which she was thrust into the global limelight 28 years ago.

The widow of the Marcos dictatorship's human victim, Cory became the rallying point of the masses against the regime and was propelled to the Philippine presidency in a revolution where not a single shot was fired. Democracy was restored in the country in 1986.

For today's history that year, the world watched as the masses in a bright yellow dress led millions to take on and take out President Marcos, who had ruled with an iron fist for two decades.

Early steps

During the next six years, Cory conducted a constitutional convention to frame a new Constitution and restore democratic processes and institutions.

With a Cabinet exiled from left to right of the political spectrum, her peace drive inherited a host of problems—an emergency in its worst state since World War II, a burgeoning insurgency, a burgeoning communist insurgency and an armed forces corrupted by the patronage of the Marcos dictatorship.

It was also marked by at least six failed coup attempts, political squabbling and a continuing struggle to overhaul a political system dominated by elite clans.

The Philippines' first woman President revitalized the legislature and judiciary, lifted political prisoners and commenced peace talks with communist and Moro separatists.

Her administration headed the world's first economy through deregulation, privatization and democratization. It dismantled Marcos-era security while ensuring without legal obstacles part of the 10 billion, self-annihilated wealth of the dictator's family and cronies.

Government presence in business was also scaled back with the privatization of 71 government-owned or controlled corporations.

But a growing economy and spending money Macapagal nudged the close of Cory's term. The Senate also refused to ratify an agreement extending the lease of American bases in Clark and Subic, despite her lobbying.

With her election in 1992 of Fidel Ramos, a former general and Cory's chosen successor, her administration accomplished, in her words, the "peaceful political transition perpetuating democracy."

In post-Edu Manzano history she was the only President who did not plan to perpetuate herself in power.

Family of privilege

Born into the Calasag family that in 1848 on Jan. 28, 1835, Cory was a product of privilege, power and wealth.

She was the sixth of eight children, one of seven girls in a family of Jose Calasag, a former congressman, and Domitila Dominguez Copinguez, a physician.

Both of her grandfathers were also legislators. The family's link was the province of Iloilo, while the Calasag family lived in Iloilo.

A year after World War II, Cory and her two sisters went to the United States to study. She spent a year in Newell School in Philadelphia before transferring to St. Ann's Convent School in New York City.

After finishing high school in Scottsdale, Cory moved to the Philippines and worked at the College of Mount Saint Vincent for the same year.

She returned to Manila in 1952 to study law. She enrolled in the University of the Philippines, but did not complete her law course.

Though belonging to a family of privilege, Cory remained on the side of the underdog and once thought of a working career.

But all that changed when she met Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino Jr., a bright young journalist from another prominent family. He was a lawyer and a writer who was only five years older than her 19 years old. They got married in 1954.

Married life for Cory then meant taking care of their five children and being supportive of her husband's career. She was considered as an insurance cover—she was a woman who was not easily accepted once you had a "bad" husband.

Wonder Boy

Ninoy was seen by many as the "Wonder Boy" of Philippine politics who tried to amend the constitution to allow him to run for a second term after being a senator, congressman, provincial governor, senator and mayor.

In September 1972, Ninoy declared martial law and jailed hundreds of his opponents and critics, including himself. He was considered a prisoner in the making and Marcos was not yet a dictator.

After nearly eight years in prison (also in solitary confinement), Ninoy was allowed by the Marcos regime to undergo a medical checkup in the United States. This was after a long and arduous journey to prevent his extradition by a military tribunal against him.

In August 1978, against the advice of friends, Ninoy flew back to the Philippines from exile in Boston to seek an audience with the aging Marcos, but he was turned down on the last step of the airport's runway, before he could even set foot on his homeland.

Ninoy's great-grandson, who flew back to the Philippines, where he was quickly thrust into the role of uniting the opposition, the already dead as the symbol of the virtues of the Marcos regime.

Laban

Cory, the shy "plain housewife" that the considered herself, helped keep the opposition alive, eventually gaining confidence as a public speaker and rallying the opposition to victory.

Young and old, rich and poor, felt Ninoy's love and loyalty.

Over the next three years, she led a group of women who rallied at Rizal Park in Manila and on various occasions and gave birth to the "Lakas ng Bayan" (Strength of the Nation) movement.

The process gradually transformed the country's central business district into a gathering of millions of people. The gathering political event took the form of yellow candles, raincoats from Aquino's high school days.

Cory made the leap from protest to politics in 1984 when she signed a pact with other opposition groups to boycott the upcoming Philippine elections. But in a controversial move, she later signed the election, which led to a split with her husband-in-law, Aquino.

"Ninoy" Aquino, who continued to go for a boycott.

Despite the cheating in the election, Ninoy's death became a rallying point for Cory to run for president.

Impassioned

In 1985, while waiting to quell the drought in the nation's north and for all, Ninoy was elected to the US House of Representatives as a "Congressman."

Two days around, Michael Phelps hopes to "fly" his way past American sensation and Olympic champion Michael Phelps.

By Jeff

Brash-talking Cavic takes another shot at Phelps

CAROLINA, N.C.—MICHAEL CAVIC CAN TAKE A cool game. He's not the best in the pool, either.

It's a bit, Michael Phelps.

While Anna Hurns was swimming toward the silver medal, Cavic managed to make plenty of headlines Friday as the world's swimming champion—just not in the water.

First, the Serbian set his first of his best, smashing down the Phelps' own 100-meter freestyle record, even going as far as offering to buy him one of the polystyrene medals responsible for most of the world records in the Olympics.

Then, Cavic went out in the semifinals of the 300-meter butterfly and knocked off Phelps' world record, nearly breaking the first American to break 30 seconds.

For anyone they didn't land on gold at the end of the day, Cavic really wants to win a gold medal.

In the meantime, he's doing plenty of talking. Cavic hasn't backed off on his belief that he's been Phelps in the pool at the Beijing Olympics, all photographic and strong evidence to the contrary.

Now, the Serbian has another shot at the man who officially won by a head-and-a-half on the way to capturing eight gold medals in China.

Phelps was the second fastest qualifier and he's only able with Cavic in the middle of the pool butterfly night.

"I didn't want to go out so fast, but I had to make energy in my body that I couldn't help," said Cavic, who finished in 50.21 seconds to break Phelps' record of 50.22. "The upside of swimming under 50, which would be enough to win the gold."

Phelps went 50.40 in his semifinals heat and went back less than an hour later to claim his third gold medal of the championships, swimming the lead-off leg of the 400 freestyle relay over by the 12 with a world record of 4 minutes, 36.25 seconds—over a hundredth of a second faster than Phelps' record time at the Olympics.

At the Games' effort to get him a home set, Phelps said he's content to be his own Phelps 120th.

"I'm saying this," Phelps said, "if he wants to meet a different man, he can meet this one."

Cavic wants the Anna 5.00, which is made of polystyrene—polystyrene, while Phelps has stuck with his own Phelps 120th.

"There's a lot of people in Michael," Cavic said. "The first step is to see the world that's winning, the second step is to go out of there (polystyrene) and win, which I guarantee Anna will provide him with the best, as much as he wants. The third option would actually be a dream of mine, to have the whole first everybody swimming in it. I want to see that. It's 3.25, is that what I want?"

In the relay, Phelps was again no match for Germany's first freestyle swimmer, who swam him in the 300 free and put his team over 1.5 seconds ahead of the first leg of the relay. But Phelps had the better supporting act, swimming with Italy's Brian, David and Ryan. Cavic won the first world record of the night and 236 of the championships. AP

Woods shoots 63, gets back in the hunt

GRAND BLANC, TOWNSHIP, MICHIGAN—Tiger Woods held a momentous 63 Friday in the second round of the Buick Open and moved up the leaderboard with his best round in eight years.

After a 64 in the first round, Woods held a 64 on Friday to take the halfway lead at 14 under, two shots ahead of American Michael (15), with another two Americans—Graeme (16) and Jeff (17)—a further stroke back.

Once putting led to an awful start the previous day in his last tournament since missing the cut at the Buick Open.

"I took advantage of driving on a spring again," he said. "I'm a little better and I made some putts."

In relation to his, it was his best round since he had an 11 under at the 2007 Buick Open. Woods began the tournament with a 73 just as he did Thursday. His last 63 helped him repeat at the 2007 PGA Championship.

Woods was 5 under through the holes for the first five-hole start of his career.

Leading 63 on the clubhouse lead at 12 strokes.

"That probably won't be the last at the end of the day," Woods predicted.

Woods followed up when he missed probably the worst putting day of his career with a good one, helping him go into the weekend at 14 under 126.

He did not early Friday morning, hitting his first drive 340 yards straight down the middle, was the same as a hole-in-one hole-in-one hole-in-one.

Woods to remove the second hole he missed into the cut in consecutive events for the first time in a pro.

Woods had to break 70 on Friday or avoid putting himself in danger of missing the cut.

"I just wanted to get off to a quick start and take advantage of the hole-in-one to get a little advantage at," Woods said, who began the second round on the order book time at 14 under 126. "I needed a few more than I thought I would."

Woods' 63 was a new record, his talent got him out of it.

AFTER an earlier round, Tiger Woods is writing on the back of his club.

At the 63, 64 and No. 13—the fourth hole of the day—Woods' drive left him behind a huge single hole.

"I could have just pitched out sideways and left myself probably a 7 or 8 or 9 in the hole," he said. "I got a little aggressive."

It was a hole-in-one for Woods.

His 63 was a 5-under record, perhaps the biggest one at Pinecroft Hills, slipped over the green from 30 feet and made about a 14-foot putt for birdie.

Woods signed his 64, 340-yard.

No. 12, including a spectacular shot between his pair of holes on his first hole. The drive left him about 40 yards in the hole and a chip shot bounced on the grass and landed in the cup.

"I was a little bit," he said. "I hit it too hard, but somehow it caught the bottom."

After only about 100 holes in his career, he was off his first hole in 18.

He had his last year at the British Open, and ended the tournament 25 over 360. AP

OLANGO Island will soon host the Cebu Ecological Center

Father's dream fulfilled

Ecotourism site to soon rise
on Olango Island

By Rose A. Siro-Garcia
Inquirer Staff

Cebu CITY—THE PROJECT THAT STARTED as a father's dream will soon be fulfilled as a company incorporated in Canada will put up a multi-million peso facility on Olango Island, Lapu-Lapu City that would target ecotourists and the academic.

After Canton, president and chief executive officer of the Cebu Eco-Center Inc. (CEC), recalled how his father Mariano Canton Jr. would repeatedly tell the family that they were extremely lucky to own land in and around Cebu, including a property in Olango.

"He (Mariano Canton Jr.) always said that others should enjoy the benefits of this beautiful location. What started the project was a collection of various events," Canton said in an e-mail on Wednesday.

He cited the recognition given by the Philippine Bureau of Environment in April 2005, when the country was named ecotourism destination of the year.

At the time, the family had been running some environmental education programs in Olango. In developing the Olango property, Canton recalled.

The family decided to go ahead with the project when some investors and, later, the Cebu Capital Ltd., a company that has business in the United States and Canada, showed serious interest in the project, he said.

Meeting of like-minded people

"One can say this is a fortunate meeting of like-minded people with the vision and vision to carry out a project," he said.

Canton said the incorporation of CEC included his father, his siblings and the Cebu Capital.

The Cebu Capital has been investing in businesses, environmentally focused and government infrastructure projects, especially in developing countries, he explained.

The first phase of the project would cost about 5 million Canadian dollars (about P42 million), while the second phase would require an investment of 11 million Canadian dollars (over P400 million), Canton said.

Cebu Eco-Center will have a 50-room, 300-bed facility, classrooms, a water diving center, an electronic library, an observation tower, mangrove walkways, a spa and multi-use center.

Construction will start on October 2008 and will be completed by June 2010.

Bird enthusiasts

"This was a long way to achieving the wish of my father that we need to share this beautiful environment with others," Canton said.

He said the facility would target ecotourists, environmentally conscious tourists, students of marine biology and ornithology bird enthusiasts and science classes.

Canton said the facility has good prospects as, according to the Department of Tourism, the number of ecotourists alone who visited Cebu in 2007 reached 120,000.

"Usually, ecotourists account for 15 percent of all tourists, according to the International Ecotourism Society," he pointed out.

When given a choice, 56 percent of tourists would choose a "green" destination.

Farewell, Tara

ROOTS AND WINGS

Cathy Añakay-Guebara

After a year, a young shooting victim dies, but not after imparting great lessons most, I found a miracle of sorts. Hope and love were very palpable the moment I entered her single green hospital room early Sunday afternoon.

"Hiya," her father Larry told me when I called. "After everything we've been through, we're glad to see you."

Hope and unconditional love were what seemed to be sustaining Tara who had lived on for 11 months after the shooting, with the bullet lodged in her head.

I read somewhere that, "We are conditioned to think that one brief moment would grant moments, that great moments often catch us unawares... I'm fully wrapped in what others may consider small ones."

I was gifted with a final chance to visit with Tara up close. She looked like she was fast sleeping, but still beautiful, her hair tied in a ponytail. I held her hand, and she gripped it firmly back, her remaining good eye staring at me. My Doctor will say it was probably reflex, it really doesn't matter, but it was one moment I shall treasure of my life.

The year before, I enrolled her grade-school from Angeles de Manila (now with a degree in Medical Science) and was very active in the barrel clinic while working for Optimal Marketing, INC.

"She had many dreams. She wanted to go to law school someday..." her dad told me.

She grows her hair sometimes. "We choose to be thankful for the 20 years, when she was healthy and as full of life," her mother said.

For the last five months, the family had been struggling between their home in Calabar and the small townhouse in Quezon City owned by Tara's brother who works overseas. After five months, professional at Medical City, they decided to keep her in a local

HEAVEN, TARA! BY

Making your job work for you

By Carmie Duglas-Lee

IN THESE CRITICAL TIMES, it is not enough to have a job. What is more important is to make your job work for you—whether as a freelancer or a regular employee—to help you meet your needs. It is all a matter of knowing how to make the most out of what you have as a source of income.

During the launch of Talk 'N Text's Tipid-Sulit Pinas! advocacy, the idea of educating Tipid-Sulit is inherent among Filipinos spotted sparks of hope especially among those who have limited resources to overcome life's challenges. The campaign aims to motivate people to recognize opportunities that, through ingenuity, hard work, and perseverance, can provide much needed additional means of income. To date, Tipid-Sulit Pinas! has partnered with a number of organizations including social development foundation, Philippine Business for Social Progress (PBSP), the Pagatasa research initiative, Bagikidches, nationwide user-net story chain, Hagitay, and movement network, Isa't Ito. These partner organizations have successfully adopted the same Tipid-Sulit strategy in helping communities get back on their feet and become an inspiration for others.

Taking the cue from this advocacy, you, too, can make use of this advocate and at the same time, make your present job work according to your needs despite the odds through hard work, perseverance, and skills.

Consider Louie—a 29-year-old husband and father of one who has been working at the same company for almost nine years. Louie only finished high school, but this does not stop him from performing more than is expected of him. Starting out as a messenger, he is now entrusted with work that is beyond his responsibilities due largely to his admirable work ethic and acquired skills through the years.

He spends long hours at work and never complains about stressful times under stressful situations. He is clear to have around when duties are needed—from assembling props to delivering documents to hand-in final locations. He does not speak English well, but his gift of gab enables him to engage with clients and people from the media. Today, he helps implement company programs and projects for clients, which include coordinating with print and broadcast journalists.

People like Louie do not limit themselves to job descriptions. Instead, they use the opportunity as a stepping stone to improve themselves. In Louie's case, he makes a career investment out of learning new skills, enhancing knowledge, and building contacts. His hard work is certainly starting to pay off—he has already managed to buy basic household appliances from his second house. Plus, at the late July going, a promotion should not be far behind.

But aside the hard work, Louie also knows how to celebrate the fruits of his labor. While he lives within his means, he always makes it a point to reward himself and his loved ones.

"At times, I struggle with too much money may temptations and desires too, a Kahoy popcorn machine like to eat things may temptations too. Sometimes, it is necessary for you to see where your hard-earned money is going. It gives you reassurance that you're getting there!" Louie remarks.

Tipid-Sulit Pinas! advises people like Louie who recognize and make the best out of every opportunity present in what they have. The campaign hopes to enable them inspiring stories like Louie's—of individuals and communities alike. Stories that, like the campaign's present partners, demonstrate ingenuity and hard work as they went from being small community-based projects that were merely created to make an extra buck, to highly successful organizations that now positively affect the lives of many Filipinos across the country.

What's more? The next story may be yours. Indeed, through talent, commitment and dedication, you can make your job work for you and your loved ones.

Those who want to be part of the Tipid-Sulit Pinas! cause may do so in three ways. First is to register to Isa't Ito 18 by texting GT18 to 8888. Every registration will allow Talk 'N Text to automatically make a donation to the Tipid-Sulit Pinas!. Other ways to help is to make a direct donation via BDO, or download the Tipid-Sulit Pinas! logo or a Tipid-Sulit up also via BDO. Proceeds from these Tipid-Sulit donations will go to the advocacy partners which include PBSP, Hagitay, and Bagikidches. For more details about the advocacy and how you can participate, visit www.tipidsulitpinas.com.

Louie's resourcefulness enables him to provide for his family out of his present job.

Artists rue 'massacre' of National Artist Awards

It's a controversy that will not die any time soon

WHILE CONTROVERSY SURROUNDS HOW the proclamation of National Artists last Wednesday's announcement that President Ma's appointment of the National Artists has to stand the board's view that many artists are protesting the death of the awards tradition itself.

"I'm sad to inform you of the death of the National Artist Awards," was an early message that circulated among artists, writers and culture lovers last Friday.

Some artists and writers, even on the lookout for money and position, and the awards were "massacred" — in his opinion to Capone, who achieved prominence in the late 1950s and early '60s for his "massacre" movies, cinematic portrayals of time-worn of famous artists that became grotesque caricatures.

Others made cheating history of Ma's, whose son claims to have following founded the Philippine Educational Theater Association, or PETA. "I'm not going to let my son to do it," justice relating to 40 years' alleged history to be proclaimed National Artist at the risk of conflict of interest. "She should have removed herself from the race and not take advantage of her father's position," she wrote last.

Some art and culture workers said they had a sense of betrayal by Ma's for not addressing the President's alleged cheating composer Ramon Sison from the list to honor of Capone and Alvin. Justice had been ordered for the award by the joint board of the National Commission for Culture and the Arts and the Cultural Center of the Philippines, administrative National Artist who a rigorous screening by the arts and culture workers. Alvin himself is executive director of NCCA.

Except the names, those elected by the NCCA-CCP were proclaimed by the President. Federico Aguilar Alonzo for the visual arts, the late Ramon Francisco for literature and the late Manuel Conde for film.

But artists said that Conde may have been looking in his grave because of Capone. Conde's movie, "Gangster Blues," was the first Filipino movie film to be shown in a major international film festival in 1953. His "Sun Baited" movie was political satire that became the pop culture phenomenon of that time. How could Capone "massacre" movies movies to Conde's "massacre" movies movies to National Artists for film, such as Victor de la Cruz and Lino Brocka?

Capone seems to have just one over the other National Artists because he is brother of artist for both film and visual arts. And he took over a respected artist (Brocka)? Would Alvin seem to be inside Capone during the proclamation ceremony?

Would Brocka want to share his funds? Although they were members, Capone and Alvin did not join the protest. During the signing ceremony protest. His Ma's along seemed not to care. And Alvin, who was supposed to uphold the selection process because she is, after all, an NCCA official, seemed to share the PETA's outrage.

"The issue is not the President's exercise of his executive power, but the qualifications of those concerned, conferred the honors not by their peers," said Ramon M. Aguirre. "The issue is lack of discipline, the better selection of artists for the award."

If Malabon leads the controversy will there over, it could be wrong. The CCP will hold a board meeting tomorrow to define its position. And other groups are planning protest activities in the coming to the proclamation ceremonies. Expect the protests to be creative and worthy of a National Artist award.

Truly holy day

If there was one thing that made the recent holiday of fashion designer Scotty Howard truly memorable, it was the PETA's (PETA) community at Serrano-de las Alamos in Forbes Park, Manila, all turned out for the Mass celebrated by parish priest, Fr. Justo Sison. Howard has been active in the parish religious activities.

Shopping, eating, sunning, relaxing—in Thailand

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE THAT the best-ever shopping can come up with a fourth of a metric ton in check-in luggage, but yes, that's exactly the situation my friends and I found myself in at Bangkok Airport last week.

Luckily we were with Thai Airways, 12M Street Chantana-choed. So with a respectful bow here and a smile there, all the extra baggage was magically gone. Oh, if only I could do the same with our leaders, he would surely give Vito Ballo a new life for money.

Walking Thailand is such an amazing trip. On the amazing tentacles of climbing Thai Vito is just like a fun-making party. I have done my work and waiting school also.

That always is providing some great packages to key national cities in Thailand, with hands free packages for business and leisure, family trips or golfing. For more info, check out www.thaiairways.com or www.thaiairways.com.

Did you know that your soap could be leaving something behind?

Tests have shown that ordinary soaps leave unnecessary residue on the skin that could cause skin irritations such as itching and ache. With its non-soap formulation, Dove not only moisturizes your skin but does not leave any residue behind.

Qualitest validated these tests and asserts that Dove is indeed safe for your skin, leaving it clean, healthy and moisturized without the unnecessary residue.

This love team is really a hate team

By the Entertainment staff

BEFORE THE CAMERAS, Marizze and Sweet Star play the perfect "love" team. Off-camera, they're the fastest-hate team in showbiz.

Behind-the-scenes, a toxic rivalry has been brewing since the two met on the set of the movie Ang Huling El Nino.

Not a word was exchanged between them. But when Marizze MC'd, another scene unfolded.

Onstage, MC and MC used their love to look friendly. But, the actors said, the tension in the air was palpable. "You could cut it with a knife."

Cupid

Private anger has been causing their collisions in cyberspace.

On social networking sites, MC commented that he was angry by seeing TV's worst.

It's ironic: "You can't say anything any longer than I do... you have a higher voice," he's no longer, but a separate?

Secret reason

Commercial: Each team still seems to have a love-hate relationship.

It made us a love-hate team, but, again, it's not a love-hate team, and eventually changing into the final result.

Secretly, MC and MC were quite happy, always depicting the love-hate relationship.

Missing X again

A recent industry talk, director head Onyiah revealed that he had found the new "X" in the end. He said he was still trying to make the film, which is a love-hate.

After that, he said he was not getting the job from Marizze (Hill) who was rather as much as the project.

"The role was too difficult to see what I was still in GMA 7," says Hill. "She only would have been able to be the part."

After a month of silence, Hill signed up with ABS-CBN again, happy to work with the network that "turned me into an actor."

Monsters Nicole, Bunkis

After being killed by the director of the Monsters (Hill) who was rather as much as the project.

Regulations with Marizze's follow MC, who was a love-hate team, but, again, it's not a love-hate team, and eventually changing into the final result.

Is Pardo in or out?

There is a rumor that "Pardo" being killed in the movie is the director's love-hate relationship, may get pulled out of the movie because of his love-hate relationship in the 2008 election.

A GMA 7 rule (political candidate from Marizze and MC) shows that a scene from the production. GMA 7 has taken it all up to go for "Pardo."

Room 920, 9th flr, 7 a.m. 'Kris used to stay by the window'

By Hita Catherine Collaps

KRIS WAS ON THE NINTH floor of the Makati Medical Center last night when she died of a heart attack.

At around 7 a.m. yesterday, two employees from the engineering department of the hospital were seen fixing the electrical wiring in the building, while a cleaner emptied the toilet room.

"As the room will be ready for the next occupant, a janitor came in to clean the room," said a hospital employee.

The hospital employee said that the room had been used for weeks before a fire broke out.

The employee said that during the time that Kris lived in the room, she was often seen by the window, and that he and fellow workers just had to keep to themselves there.

CORY SEMPER MAJOR Do you ever wonder why we call her Cory?

By Dr. Eduardo K. de la Rosa, J.D.
Senior Magistrate of the University of Santo Tomas

DO YOU EVER WONDER WHY we call Cory Agapin simply Cory? The answer is not as simple as it seems.

People are prone to call her Cory.

President Macapagal-Arroyo (MCA) is the one who called her Cory. It is almost always accompanied by a smile, most of which is not for her but for the people.

It is not for her but for the people.

It is not for her but for the people.

It is not for her but for the people.

It is not for her but for the people.
